ALLEGED MURDERER CONFESSES CRIME TO LOCAL AUTHORITIES

Oakland Man Admits Guilt to Ebright, Radbruch

Conscience-stricken and fearing the retaliation of a murdered man's friends, James Poulos, 35, walked into the Niles justice court Friday and asked for a constable. He stated that he "had something to get off his chest," and allegedly confessed to the murder of Louis Johnson, 38, in Oakland last Tuesday night.

According to a report from Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch and Constable O. W. Ebright last Saturday, Johnson's body was found on the street in Oakland, by the Oakland police, who were attempting to piece the story together at the time of the confession.

According to Radbruch, Poulos said that he had been attacked by Johnson, when he attempted to prevent the latter from abusing a woman on the sidewalk. Poulos said Johnson threatened him. In the ensuing fight, according to authorities, Poulos drew a pair of scissors and stabbed Johnson several times in the chest, then threw the improvised weapon into the street and fled from the scene.

Poulos assertedly declared that he had walked to San Jose, then returned to Niles, where acquaintances advised him to surrender. He made his confession to Constable Ebright, who called Radbruch. The latter took Poulos to the county jail.

Radbruch and Ebright said that Poulos was lightly clad and wearing carpet slippers when he was taken into custody.

DRAMATIC SECTION CHRISTMAS PLAY ENJOYED BY CLUB

Musical Program Said Perfect; Mrs. Bristow Complimented

Following an interesting business meeting Tuesday afternoon the Country Club of Washington township closed the year with an unusually attractive program, consisting of a play "Cousin Terry" and a series of musical selections.

At the business session preceding the program, Mrs. Lee Williams of Irvington was voted a member and the name of Mrs. L. Mendenhall of Niles proposed.

Mrs. Laura Whipple announced the donation of a Mission Trail marker to be placed at the summit of the Stockton pass by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Appropriate acceptance was voted and the committee will be appointed to assist in the selection of a site.

Mrs E. D. Bristow of the music committee next introduced the two guest artists for the day, Mrs. Dorothy Nichols Lewis, teacher cello, and Miss Margaret Noyes, supervior of music in the San Leandro schools.

Miss Noyes played Kamennoi Ostrow, Rubenstein and a Lesohtitsky composition for the left hand of the Sextette from Lucia. The latter was a particularly beautiful rendition.

Mrs. Lewis next played two cello selections, Rondino, by Kriesler, and To a Wild Rose by McDowell. The first was beautiful.

Mrs. E D. Bristow was complimented on her selection of the musical program.

The play "Cousin Terry" written and directed by Mrs. Barton Webb drew tremendous response from the audience. Mrs. Webb has given much of her time and talent for the enjoyment of the Club.

The cast —Mrs. C. E Anderson, Mrs. Barton Webb, Mrs. F. T. Dusterberry and Mrs. George Coit.

SLIPPERY PAVEMENT CAUSES CRASH AT MISSION

Northbound on a slippery pavement south of Mission San Jose Sunday afternoon, W. B. Sayers, of Ben Lomond, lost control of his heavy car, skidded across the highway and capsized in a deep culvert. Neither Sayers nor his wife, who was riding with him, were hurt.

According to granagemen who were called to right the vehicle, the crash may be traced to smooth treads on the tires. Traffic at the moment was light, according to Sayers, which fact probably averted more serious consequences.

Mr. and Mrs. Sayers were on their way to northern California on a fishing trip. Their machine was not badly damaged.

CHAMBER LISTENS TO TALK ON WATER PROJECT MONDAY

Geo. W. Smart, Economist, Supports Valley Water Plan

Pointing out that opposition to the Central Valley Water Project arises from the opposition of power companies to the generating and sale of cheap electrical power, George H. Smart, financial economist, Monday took the affirmative in a debate on the project before the Niles Chamber of Commerce. Next Monday the Chamber will listen to a speaker who will give reasons why the project should be voted down.

Smart began his discussion with the presentation of three points in relation to the Central Valley project. He stated that it was generally agreed that the project was necessary and feasable, and that it was restricted legally for the protection of the taxpayer. By means of elimination, Smart narrowed the opposition down to the power companies and to several legal technicalities.

Arguing in favor of the project, Smart stated that industries in the Delta region were in dire need of fresh water, and that agricultural land in the same region was rapidly becoming worthless because of the same need. The speaker also said that water from the northern part of the state, where rainfall is heavy, could well be used in the more arid central portions of the state. At the present time, Smart said, flood waters of the Sacramento river, besides causing damage to valley lands, are lost into the sea. He intimated that the Central Valley project would cure all these ills. Smart concluded his talk with the statement that he honestly believed the passage of the bill would benefit the state.

Next Monday a speaker will be obtained to refute the arguments presented this week.

Previous to Smarts' address, F. V. Jones urged that voters weigh the problem carefully.

Ray Peterson, manager of the Niles C. of C. baseball team spoke shortly on the fine work of his men so far, and suggested that the members of the team be treated to a dinner by the Chamber. The matter was left to the baseball committee, Dr. E. C. Grau, Bill Helm and Peterson for discussion.

E. E. Glassbrook, chamber member, was commended for his effective portrayal of a peppery uncle in the P. T. A. play "Nobody But Nancy" recently.

J. L. Bunker, assistant superintendent of schools was a guest at the meeting.

GEORGE GEMIGNANI WEDS MISSION GIRL SUNDAY

DECISION RENDERED BY R.R. COMMISSION ON WATER COMPANY

Rates To Be Lowered, Pressure Increased Is Official Ruling

Improvements in the Centerville water system that will provide throughout its distribution system, a working pressure of 35 pounds per square inch static, are ordered by the commission in a decision handed down in a complaint instituted by consumers against the Centerville Water Company. The decision states that the additional pressure required by the order may be obtained either through the installation of additional storage space having a higher elevation than the existing storage tank or otherwise. The improvements must be installed before April 1, 1934.

Rates are charged to provide for the delivery of 400 cubic feet of water per month for a minimum charge of $1.25 per month. At the present time 300 cubic feet of water is delivered at this price. No other rate charge was made.

The decision found that the annual net return upon the company's investment for the past two years had been 6.1 per cent. Discussing the matter of rates and return and declaring the necessity for improvements in the property, the decision of the commission makes the following comment:

"From the rate of return at present earned by this utility, it is clear that no substantial reduction in its charges can be made at this time without seriously affecting its earning power. nevertheless, it is apparent that the water pressure is so low and the storage facilities so insignificant that the service supplied by defendant company is not reasonably worth the amount now being paid therefor by the users."

TAX LEAGUE WILL DISCUSS CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT

Mass Meeting Slated For Monday Night At High School

Planning to offer intelligent discussions of the pros and cons of the Central Valley Water project, to be voted upon at the special election on December 19, the Washington Township Taxpayers League urges that all voters attend the mass meeting to be held Monday night, December 11, in the auditorium of the Washington Union High School.

Speakers versed in the details of the proposed project will present arguments both for and against passage of the bill that will make it a reality. Legal aspects, as well as obscure technical points will be discussed.

According to word from Tax League officials this week, public knowledge of the project and its far-reaching effects is sketchy. Many voters taking little interest with the assumption that the proposed construction will have no local effect.

Realizing that the issue is a vital one, officials of the tax league hope that all taxpayers will attend the meet next Monday night.

Besides the discussion of the Central Valley Water Project, other matters of interest to the taxpaying public will be be brought up.

The meet is scheduled to begin at eight o'clock.

MANY REGISTER FOR FEDERAL RELIEF JOBS LAST WEEK

Local Projects Pending Approval, Says R. Richmond

Taking advantage of the opportunity to register for employment under the new federal plan of public works, more than one hundred men from Niles and the surrounding area last week made the Niles court house their Mecca.

Opened last Tuesday as a branch of the Hayward Registering office, the Niles office was kept open until noon Saturday. According to Judge J. A. Silva, the initial day's registration was the heaviest. He stated that seventy men signed on Tuesday.

Supervisor Ralph V. Richmond stated Tuesday that a number of workers from this district have been sent to projects in other parts of the county, but that the balance may be employed locally when projects now pending are approved. Richmond said the Warm Springs drainage project will give work to a considerable number of men. It is planned to construct a series of ditches to conduct away the excess run-off of hillside streams in the Warm Springs district. Heretofore the area has been inundated in times of heavy rain.

Mrs. Bessie Nilson was a Berkeley visitor Saturday afternoon.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

By NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

WHAT ARE YOUR REACTIONS?

Well, as we all know, the water wagon has been overturned, and the whisky truck rattles over the pavement in glee.

And what is your reaction?

That depends, we suppose, upon whether you believe that it is the inalienable right of man to drink what he pleases, where he pleases and as much as he pleases; or, if, on the other hand, you view as a menace, of whatever kind and alcoholic content, liquor, and feel it your conscientious duty to fight at every turn, continuously, unremittingly —with the zeal of a crusader—and regardless of what progress you make in the contest, never compromise with what you believe to be that vilest of all social evils.

The writer, as the reader doubtless knows, is dry. His opinion on the indulgence in liquor has not changed a bit, and he feels no inclination to join in the celebration over the nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment. He realized, however. the right of the majority to rule, and concedes. without reluctance, this principle of government to his wet antagonists.

At the present moment it is very apparent to anyone that a large majority of the people want the sale of liquor to become a lawful traffic. The states, we have seen, have rapidly, one by one, voted for the repeal of prohibition. Just what attitude will be taken by the majority one year, or several years hence, is problematical.

It may be that we are in for many years of the open saloon. You know we were not going to have saloons again. Absolutely not. But we have them already. If you can call the College Inn and the Oakland Hotel bar anything else but a saloon, then we give up. Argument and the presentation of facts is a waste of time. A cesspool by any other name will stink just as much.

You know, dear reader, when the older people of this day were young men and women, a man was a man and the women stayed at home and looked after the children and the castle. That was her sphere of influence, and it was a worthwhile sphere, after all. Men could, and would go to the corner saloon and get "googey," and wallow around with the swine, but mother at home was clean. Her morals were clean, her speech was clean and her example an inspiration. Father might swear, and smoke and drink, but mother—oh, how we cherish that memory of the old-fashioned mother.

If some women were inclined to go to a saloon in the old days, the law and public sentiment said no! so emphatically that only prostitutes were ever found there and then only in the meanest, vilest joints in the tenderloin district.

We went into several beer establishments in San Francisco and Oakland last week, and what did we find? As many women as men. Girls in their teens were lolling against the bar drinking, and smoking cigarettes, and mighty familiar were they with their escorts and even strangers. It is not a pretty picture. You men who have howled so loud for your open bars may not be so enthusiastic when you find your wives and daughters frequenting these places and conducting themselves in an unbecoming fashion with strange and dissolute male companions.

But of course, we may be wrong. Our prejudice may again be asserting itself. The average American father may not object to his daughter and his wife having the same splendid "privileges" that he himself enjoyed so much. And then again —well, let's wait and see.

Pipe Plant At Niles Closed After Long Run

With the completion of the Hetch Hetchy pipe line from the Tesla bore to the bay shore, through Washington township, the Oakland Steel and Concrete Pipe company's branch plant at Niles was shut down last week.

Set up several months ago, the plant had been running night and day turning out the huge concrete sections that compose the pipe line.

According to reports, the plant at Niles will not be entirely dismantled at once, it being the plan of the company to leave some of the equipment here pending removal to another job location.

Manufactured in Niles, the heavy pipe sections were transported to the pipe line right-of-way by specially constructed trucks.

J. L. Bunker, assistant superintendent of schools and former principal of the Niles grammar school was a visitor in Niles Monday.

Fate in the Way

By DUFORD JENNE

THE lights of Marion's car shooting up the road picked up the glint of metal at the distant curve, and the next moment she saw that she was approaching what was evidently a wrecked car. Coming nearer, she pulled her heavy roadster to a stop. Then her headlights brought into sharp relief the figure of a man crumpled just beyond the twisted frame.

She slipped from her car and to his side. He was unconscious, and the bloodstains on his face proved that he had reason to be. Climbing down to the brook that followed the road, she brought cold water and bathed his face. The even, rather handsome face, gave no sign of life and she began to be frightened; then he moaned slightly, turned, and opened his eyes.

"Oh, I remember—the world turned over twice," he muttered.

"This is a bad curve, and the road is icy this time of year," she said. "How do you feel now?" she asked.

"I—" She felt him relax again into unconsciousness.

"There's just one thing to do," she thought to herself; "that is to take him back home—and that's the last place where I want to go!"

Between them and the little wayside railroad station to which she had been speeding there were twenty miles of country, and at the station there would be no possibility of medical aid, while her father was a physician spending the precious end of his vacation at his country home.

She revived the unconscious man, and, using her sturdy self as a crutch, she managed to get him to her car and into it.

"I am sorry—to make you so much trouble," he said faintly.

"Never you mind," she said gently, wondering just what he would think if he knew that he had interrupted an elopement, that even now her lover was waiting at the wayside station for her, that the western express would soon be due—

"Why, he's slipped away again," she thought to herself, glancing at him, and, slipping an arm around him and under his head she sent the car humming homeward.

The house was as dark as when she had left. She blew her horn, smiling a bit as she realized the dramatic quality of the moment. The door opened at the house as the light was turned on. Presently her father came out.

"What? You? Why—what does this m[illegible] And who—an injured man? [illegible] does this mean, Marion?" he ejaculated.

"Explanations later, Dad."

"Right, Mischief." He started to lift the hurt man from the car. "Great Scott! It's Norman Bradley—my old friend Bradley's son. He had written that he might be out to see us!"

The next day brought her two unhappy times. In the morning she was called to the telephone, and over the phone came her lover's voice, bitter with accusation.

"But, Beals, I couldn't do otherwise," she urged.

His swift, prolonged reply left her cheeks flushed, and her will on fire. As she hung up the receiver, her father came near.

"Marion, is that scamp calling you?" he demanded. "And it is perfectly plain that you were planning to join him last night. Now—"

"Dad, let's not argue it! I was. I have tried—tried to forget him, but I love him," she added, weary and unhappy.

He looked at her in silence, then said: "Remember—I forbid you to marry him. You are all that is left that is dear to me," he said simply as she fled.

It was several days later that Norman, walking with her through the autumn-tinted grounds, said suddenly, "Marion, you and your father forgot I was lying in the library when you had your brief conversation about your—er—delayed elopement. It was over before I could warn you I was there. I am really sorry—if you love this chap—that, I was fate in the way. I would offer to help you, but I want you myself."

"Oh, you do!" she replied, "but suppose I love another—and suppose I have made up my mind to join him just as soon as you depart, and father and I can have the scandal to ourselves!"

He stopped suddenly, and pity rose in her heart as she saw his pale face. "Marion, if you love him so much, I will help you join him, but you don't know—that moment when I looked up and saw your face over mine, heard your voice—was the beginning." He said no more, his face gray with pain.

She slipped her hand under his arm, and said gently, "Is it as bad as that? Then, let me tell you a secret; over the phone that morning Beals was so bitter, angry and harsh that something in me died then and there—what I know now was some sort of girlish fascination he had for me. And perhaps—perhaps you can take me away with you if you try hard, for—for when I held your head in my— No! not here—yet—but—one of these days!"

Bill's Mistake

By LOUISE LANGDALE

©, 1933, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

BILL BRADLEY unstrapped his helmet and flung it into the air. "Heigho!" he exclaimed, recapturing it, "one more flight under instruction and I'll be allowed to solo. Wonder who'll take me tomorrow—not that it makes much difference," he added, little knowing just how much difference it was going to make.

The next morning when he reported at the Middlesex airport, run by a retired major from Washington, Bill found a marked absence of activity.

"Where is everybody?" he asked.

"Air meet, sir, in Northport. The boss left word you were to go up with Miss Wilmott. Said she'd be waiting at No. 2 hangar."

Bill did not know Lida Wilmott, but he had heard of her as an extremely capable, fearless pilot. In spite of her reputation, however, Bill wasn't keen about taking his last bit of instruction from a woman.

Strolling down to No. 2 hangar, he found a slim, knickered, helmetted figure adjusting goggles, drawing on gloves. There was little of her face to be seen beyond a slightly tip-tilted nose and a rather fetching, firm little chin.

"I presume you are waiting for me," said Bill.

"I presume I am," remarked the slim figure, gravely impersonally.

He took off gracefully. So far, so good. His able companion he felt could have done no better.

Little by little, Bill, who was a born flyer, began—absurdly, of course—to resent the presence of one who was undoubtedly, so he felt, criticising his technique, and that one a woman. An obsession seized him to show off before her. Later, he might recognize this desire as the primitive urge of the male to strut before the female, and be properly ashamed. But, for the moment, he allowed himself to be carried away by it.

Higher and higher he mounted, turned and came up into the wind, dipped earthward and recovered, pulled a side-slipping stunt his instructor had taught him, and then, handing him a tiny folded note, said:

"Can you loop the loop?"

So she was trying him out, was she? Bill looped the loop for her, not once, but several times. Ah, how he loved it—this flying! The great earth spread out below in queer patches that were sometimes cities, sometimes country, sometimes ocean. The feeling that he was at one with the birds, the winds, the stars, with everything not earthbound. If ever he met a girl who felt about flying as he did. . . .

He remembered that another task was still before him, that of making a graceful landing. Nothing more marked the tyro than to come in on one wheel or trailing a wing.

Spiralling above the field, he saw several black specks moving about with an activity similar to that ascribed to molecules. The specks resolved themselves into human beings and an automobile very much like the one belonging to the major who, Bill fervently trusted, was attending the air meet.

The major was a conservative old cuss, all for safety and no stunt flying.

Bill's joy in a perfect three-point landing was spoiled by the fact that the major was not at the air meet but beside the hangar, unmistakably waiting for Bill as he taxied to a standstill.

Bill read in the major's face that he was in for no ordinary reprimand. What a mistake he had made, showing off before a woman he had never seen before.

He stepped out and turned to assist his companion. The major grabbed his arm.

"What in—in Heaven's name do you mean—"

His words were choked by the startling action of Bill's recent flying partner who flung her arms about the major's neck. "Don't scold him. You promised me—"

"I promised you I'd send somebody competent to take you up, not a young whipper snapper without any license. What do you mean, young man, by nearly killing my niece?"

"Your niece?" Bill looked blank. "I didn't know Miss Wilmott was your niece!"

The major became, if possible, more apoplectic in countenance. "Who said Miss Wilmott was my niece? Who said anything about Miss Wilmott? My niece comes on here from Washington crazy to fly. I bring her out here and tell her to wait until I get somebody to take her up. Come back to find her gone with a young fool trying to break her neck."

Bill stood abjectly twirling his helmet. Suddenly, he felt the pressure of a slender hand on his arm. "He'll get over it!" a soft voice whispered. "And—oh, it was wonderful! Next time—" she smiled and said no more.

Bill thrilled. She would go again with him. She loved it as he did. And now he saw that besides a slightly tip-tilted nose and a fetching, firm little chin she had two eyes as softly blue as the sky itself.

Nothing New

Metal plating is not a discovery of recent years, according to a professor of Columbia university. He has announced after a study of a copper kettle in the Metropolitan museum, thousands of years old, that it has a metal base of copper and a silvery plating of a thin coat of antimony.

Hopi Indians

Hopi Indians, says Pathfinder Magazine, descended from the Shoshonean stock which originally inhabited the region now Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and adjacent territory. They have dwindled in numbers and the most of them are to be found in Arizona.

The Penny

By ELOISE BENNETT

©. 1933, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

"YOU may go home, now, Thomas." Laura McElroy settled her small and aged body back comfortably against the taupe velours of her car, surveying with satisfaction the assortment of small packages by her side. Between the thin, veined forefinger and thumb of her left hand she held a penny. After her eyes had wandered appraisingly over the packages they turned on the penny.

It was an Indian head penny. It had come into Mrs. McElroy's possession not two minutes before in the change from the jig-saw puzzle she had bought. It would do for the day's gift to ten-year-old Bobby.

Every afternoon, unless extreme weather interfered, Thomas, the McElroy chauffeur for twenty years, took Mrs. Anthony McElroy, senior, on a shopping expedition from the house where she lived with her son and her grandson. On this expedition she did such small errands as the various busy members of the family needed. And always, at the end of the trip, there was one final errand, some knick-knack for Bobby, her great-grandson.

Thomas fidgeted slightly. "Quite sure you're finished, Mrs. McElroy?" he questioned.

"Yes, thank you, Thomas. Oh—you're thinking of Bobby! Yes, I've an Indian head penny for him. He's collecting coins, you know."

Thomas chuckled. "Yes'm. And stamps and cellophane and old pipes and—"

Mrs. McElroy went on: "Yes. And specially Indian head pennies. He wants to make a fortune with them. He's heard they're worth more than a cent now and he's trying to corner the market so that when they go up he can sell them."

Thomas, relieved, let the car out a bit and Mrs. McElroy turned the penny over in her fingers and looked at the date. An old one, 1866. She closed her eyes.

She had been—let's see, ten years old, in 1866. On a June day in that year she had found a penny, too. She remembered that she and John Martin had been walking home together from school. How the city had changed since then! There had been country lanes where there were city pavements now. And where she had lived, up near Fifty-ninth street, there had been a little pond that all the children loved. Choked under cement, now, of course, the springs and streams that fed it. She and John had loitered in the shade at the side of the pond on their way home.

"I wish we had some candy," John had said.

"Would you divide?" she had asked.

"I'd give you more than half," John had said.

"Would you, John? Oh, thank you. Oh, look! Some money!"

And there in the grass at their feet she had spied a penny—bright and new and shining. "Look, John. We'll go buy some candy. You carry the money."

So John had taken charge of their find. "It's our special penny," he had said. "I'll mark it for ours." And then they had sat on the grass while he scraped away with his knife at the edge of the penny to mark it for their own.

"It's brand new," he had said. "Look—it has this year's date!"

He let her feel the edge with her finger nail, right in front of the tip of the Indian's nose. "Now let's go buy some candy."

"Laura," John had bragged, "I'm going to be rich some day when I grow up. I'm going to have piles and piles of money. And I'm going to marry you and give you half of it. And we'll have candy each day."

John Martin—well, he'd been right. He'd laid the foundation of the great fortune that his grandsons were working so hard to hold together today. She turned over the worn old coin in her fingers. Her nail caught in a worn ridge on its edge. She opened her eyes and looked, with a little breathless start of interest. There it was—the deep ridge, right at the point of the Indian's nose, worn smooth and even.

This was the same coin.

John hadn't forgotten. He had gone West to win his wealth. He had asked her to wait for him and she had half promised. But then Anthony McElroy — poor, then, too, though he did well enough later on—had come along and she had forgotten John and her half promise. And when he came back from the West with a small fortune already his, he had found her promised to Tony.

But there was the coin in her hand, a part of John's struggle. The very same coin.

"Thomas," Mrs. McElroy said to the chauffeur. "Perhaps you'd better not go home yet. Go back to Winship's and I'll buy Bobby that new stamp album he wants. I'll keep this old penny."

HIT-RUN DRIVER GETS AWAY AFTER FREAK ACCIDENT

Victims of a hit-run fiasco in which no one was hurt, A. Zorns and F. Borgee, both of Newark, are this week ruefully straightening out twisted axles and bent fenders.

Nearing Machado's corners on the Centerville and Alvarado road Saturday night, Zorns was suddenly aware of a loud crash, as the car approaching from behind collided with his car. Forced off the road, Zorns heard several minor crashes, then noticed the Borgee car in a wrecked condition on the other side of the road. Borgee and Zorn were about to accuse each other of the crash when they noticed a car speeding away from the scene. Both realized that they were victims of a hit and run driver. Both cars were somewhat worse for the crash. The third driver was not caught.

Tony Silva to be Home From Oakland Hospital

Resting at Jackson Lake hospital following an operation for the removal of his eye after injuries suffered in an accidental gun discharge recently, Tony Silva, popular Centerville man, will soon return home, according to reports of friends this week.

Silva was hurt when he was cleaning his gun two weeks ago. Evidently failing to remove a shell from the chamber, Silva began cleaning the weapon. The rod thrust the shell against the pin, causing the explosion. Silva sustained injuries that threatened at first to blind him, but the sight of one of his eyes was saved.

Mamie S. Corriea Will Wed Manuel Pimental

Recipient of many handsome gifts at a shower tendered her Saturday night in Silva's hall at Newark, Miss Mamie S. Corriea revealed her betrothal to Manuel Pimentel of Newark. The evening was spent with games and dancing after which refreshments were served. More than 100 people attended. The marriage will take place December 18.

Knights Lose Contest to Hayward Native Sons

Victors in one game and losers in one, the Centerville K. C. basketball team stands even in games played so far. Tuesday night, due to the absence of their star forward, Tom Maloney, the Knights lost 40 to 21 to the No. 1 team of the Hayward Native Sons. Holding the score to 22 to 19 at half time, the Knights weakened and were beaten.

Following is the lineup: Forwards, Johnson and Phippen; guards, Azevedo and Duarte; center, John Brown. Substitutes were Mendonca, Fuller and Enie Pimental. Phippen and Johnson played outstanding ball.

The Knights of Columbus benefit whist is slated for tomorrow night at the parish hall.

Miss Annie Abrue and son, of Palo Alto were visitors in Centerville Friday.

"MAKE SOMETHING HAPPEN," ADVISES MR. CHICK SANTOS

"Nothing ever happens," bemoaned the despondent reporter to Chick Santos, as that worthy leaned against the window sill of the Centerville Machine shop Tuesday afternoon.

"No, it's very quiet," agreed Tony Clark, painter and glazier, as he surveyed the placid Santos.

Abuptly, things began to happen. Bill Patterson, mechanic, sauntered out of the garage, dove playfully at Santos, who did a neat backward flip through the window. The window was closed at the time. Immediately Tony Clark pulled out his rule and measured the window for a new pane. The reporter pulled out his pad and jotted down a small story. Patterson pulled out a handful of change and paid for the window, and Santos pulled out his handkerchief and wiped his eyes after a hearty laugh. The only ones who didn't think the fiasco such a joke were Frank Madruga and Herman Mau. They owned the window.

BACHELORS SUBDUED BY HUSBANDS IN BALL GAME

Proving to the unmarried blades that marriage does something after all, the Married Men on Thanksgiving Day walloped the Bachelors 7-2 in a thrilling game of baseball on the new Centerville baseball diamond.

Each team sported numbers of pitchers, who were alternated rapidly in the box to keep the score down to sensible levels. For the Married Men, the following worked on the mound. Ray Bettencourt, Wilbur Bettencourt and Joe Pacheco. Amaral held down the catcher's job.

Four pitchers employed by the Bachelors failed to stem the wedded gentlemen. Following are the four: Bill Dargitz, Al Muniz, Ed Lebon and Bradford Hodgkins. Azevedo and Rivers caught.

Pete Rose is to be commended on his tactful umpiring. He had his hands full.

Some high points of the contest are: Ira Hodgkins' sensational outfield catch, Dargitz's pitching, Wilbur Bettencourt, Lebon and Muniz as hitters and Ray Bettencourt's sideline coaching.

Played on for the first time, the new Centerville diamond proved to be in fine shape. The infield is fast and smooth. A few rains will pack the outfield sufficiently, the players aver.

THANKSGIVING DAY CONTEST WON BY CENTERVILLE

Athletic events at the Niles Grammar school grounds on Thanksgiving Day were evened up when the Niles jackass polo team defeated the Newark four by a score of 4 to 0, and the Niles C. of C.'s lost to the Centerville Merchants ball team by a score of 8 to 4.

Under the management of Ray Bettencourt, the Merchants proved too much for the Niles nine. Wilson, Centerville pitcher held the Niles boys to seven hits during the contest. Ray Duarte and Clarence Pine, Niles stalwarts, led the Niles batting list with two hits out of three tries each. Niles scored two runs in the second inning, one run in the fourth and one run in the fifth frame.

Centerville scored four runs in the third, three in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Among the highlights of the day were Bally Pine's running catch of a hard fly, Cahill's work at first base and Pine's work at short. In the Centerville team, Wilson starred on the mound. Ed Rose at third and H. Robinson at short handled themselves well.

Three Good Reasons

CANNED pineapple is being proclaimed in the press as being good for you in many different ways. Eminent scientists made the investigations upon which these claims are based, and there can be no doubt of the truth of their conclusions. But there are three good reasons, in addition to these, for eating canned pineapple. The first is that it tastes good. The second is that it smells good. And the third is that it looks good. And that's a rare combination in a food that is good for you.

Try These Recipes

Pineapple Pie with Tapioca: Press the syrup from the contents of a No. 2 can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple, add one-half cup sugar, two tablespoons lemon juice, two tablespoons orange juice and one-half teaspoon salt, and bring to boiling. Add three tablespoons minute tapioca, and cook in a double boiler fifteen minutes, or until transparent. Cool, add the crushed pineapple, and pour into a pie tin lined with pastry. Pour one-fourth cup sliced citron over, cover with strips of pastry, and bake—450° —for about thirty minutes. This makes one large pie.

Tropical Fruit Dessert: Lay one chilled slice of pineapple from a No. 2½ can on each dessert plate. Put a slice or spoonful of guava jelly in center of each. Place two small cream cheese balls rolled in crushed, salted cashew nuts on each plate, one on each side of the slice. This serves eight persons.

Tomorrow night and Friday night bring to the Hayward theatre a girl we have all wanted to meet—the girl Max Baer helped to stardom, June Knight, in "Ladies Must Love." "The Wreckers," the story of the Long Beach Earthquake, is on the same bill. Jack Holt has the lead.

Beginning Sunday for a four day run is the greatest picture of all time. Liberty Mazazine gave it four stars. "Lady for a Day," starring May Robson, Warren William,, Guy Kibbee and many others. This is a picture that everyone should see. Thongs have acclaimed it, thousands of theatre goers in the land have praised it. On the same bill is the uproarious pair, Laurel and Hardy in "The Midnight Patrol."

"Guilty Parents" is the title of the gripping tale slated for Thursday and Friday nights. It is the story of the pitfalls of youth. The players are Jean Lacy and Robert Frazer.

MANY
"JUST LAZY" CHILDREN
ARE SICK

No NORMAL child is "lazy." If youngsters don't want to eat or play — there's a reason for it. In nine cases out of ten it is lack of vitamins. And nine times in ten a bottle of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will turn the scales — set them eating, start them growing, instil their little bodies with vigor, make their minds alert and eager to learn.

There's nothing like Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil for putting health and "pep" in children. There's more vitamin A in a tablespoonful of Scott's Emulsion than in a quart of milk. It also has an abundance of vitamin D — so very necessary toward building strong bones and sound teeth. Easy to take — no unpleasant taste or odor . . . and better today than in all of its past sixty years! All druggists — 60c and $1.20.

C OF C'S SMOTHER LEAGUE LEADERS SUNDAY 14-11

Driving two Hayward pitchers from the box with a vicious seventh inning rally, the Niles C. of C.'s came from behind Sunday to defeat the Ramos team, league champions, 14 to 11, in a nip and tuck affair at the Niles Grammar school grounds.

Ramos leaped to an early lead and held it until Bellini's long triple in the fifth gave warning of a Niles spurt. Coming to bat in the seventh frame the following Niles men hit safely: T. Duarte, C. Pine, Bellini, Wes Raso and L. Pine. Cull, Manuel and Cahill drew walks.

Skittish of the wet field at first, a good crowd gathered during the game, and Bill Helm, past master at passing the hat made a substantial collection. Helm was missed at the game Thanksgiving Day.

Niles, after stopping the Ramos winning streak, is still in second place in the league.

C. Pine, Wes Raso and Arnold Bellini led the Niles batters for the day.

Niles lineup:

	AB.	R.	H.
L. Pine	4	2	2
W. Raso, ss	6	2	2
Bellini, rf	6	2	3
C. Pine	5	1	3

Sunday Niles will tackle the tough Hamilton Meats, of Hayward, at the Niles grounds. The game will start at 2:00 p. m.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB SAYS CANYON POPULAR

Both the Stockton pass and Niles canyon figured prominently in the National Automobile club road news last week. According to the club, recent scouting of the Stockton pass, from Mission San Jose to Livermore, revealed the entire road in excellent condition, and one of the most direct routes from this region over into the San Joaquin valley.

Of Niles canyon, the National Automobile club touring department said the following: "Niles canyon, between Niles and Sunol, affords an enjoyable objective for a short afternoon trip. The road through the canyon is good, being oiled gravel, and follows along the Alameda creek. Trees have donned their autumn colors and present a gorgeous sight. Although there is not much water in the Alameda creek at this time, dams have retained quite a bit of winter places, where swimming may be enjoyed when the temperature permits. There are innumerable picnic grounds through the canyon, where for the payment of a small fee, good parking places, tables and benches are available."

SAN JOSE KIDNAPPER IS CAUGHT IN SUNOL

After attempting to kidnap his former lover, Citaro Nishijina, of San Jose, was lost in the hills near Mt. Hamilton and landed in Sunol last Monday on foot. He was picked up by Constable Albert E. Vervais and Deputy Sheriff L. E. Van Patten and held in the Pleasanton jail until officers from the Santa Clara county came for him.

The story of the kidnapping is unusual and had an interesting romance attached to it.

Citaro fell in love with Miss Sakinka Matooka, 16 year old girl, of King road, San Jose, whom he attempted to kidnap Saturday evening. The young couple lived together for four months, according to Citaro, until the girl's father quarrelled with Citaro.

Citaro, who was madly in love with the girl, tried to forget her, but couldn't, so he purchased a revolver and prepared to kidnap the girl and take her to the hills and kill her and himself.

Saturday evening he met Sakika who with her brother and sister went to a Japanese church in San Jose. He got in the auto and told her brother and sister that he wanted to see the folks. When they drove down the road he ordered the brother and sister out of the car and kept Sakika. The two motored to the Mt. Hamilton road and when they reached the top they parked. After a conversation Citaro reasoned that the cause of their separation was not the girl's fault, but was due to her folks. He could not get up enough courage to kill her so he returned her to San Jose and left her in the car. He started walking to Mt. Hamilton where he intended to kill himself. When he tried to shoot himself the gun would not work. He then decided to go back to San Jose, but in the course of his journey he was lost in the hills and after wandering all day he landed in Sunol. He talked to George Rankin, of Sunol, who notified Constable Vervais. Vervais noified Van Patten at Livermore, who brought the Japanese to Pleasanton. He was later removed to San Jose by deputies from the sheriff's office at that place.

Pleasanton Legionaires To Have District Meeting Soon

Plans for the second district meeting of the tenth district of the American Legion Post to be held at Pleasanton in January, were discussed by the Pleasanton Legion boys at a meeting held at the Veteran's Memorial building last Wednesday evening.

The affair is to be one of the greatest events put on by the American Legion with seventeen Posts in Alameda county attending. A big parade consisting of Legion bands, drum corps, drill teams and hundreds of Legionnaires will be held preceeding the meeting.

The city trustees and other city officials will be guests of the Pleasanton Legion Post on that evening. Outstanding speakers will be secured for the occasion. An entertaining program is being arranged for the affair.

The committee in charge of the arrangements is headed by Ray Ewart, Pleasanton commander, and consists of Jack Simonds, Clay Elworthy, Conrad Westling and Claude Freeman.

Ewart, commander of the Post, is asking the cooperation of the people of the community and the business houses to make the affair a success.

Four Tempting Desserts—

Two Pennies a Portion

DELICIOUS desserts costing only two pennies a portion seem hardly credible. But to find such economy in desserts which will get an encore from the family is enough to fill homemakers with a sense of real achievement.

For all housewives know how difficult it is to find recipes which combine economy with appetite-appeal.

Here they are. A strawberry whip and a rhubarb mold to make a little of the season's fruit go a long but delicious way. There is double economy in this smooth, rich chocolate cream and butterscotch cream. They are packed with nourishment so serve them to wind up a very simple, inexpensive dinner.

Strawberry Whip

1 package strawberry-flavored gelatin
1 cup warm water
1 cup strawberry juice
1 cup strawberries, crushed and drained
1/3 cup sugar

Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add strawberry juice. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in strawberries and sugar. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves 10.

Rhubarb Delight

½ cup sugar
½ cup water
3 cups rhubarb, cut in small pieces
1 package strawberry-flavored gelatin
Dash of salt

Combine sugar and water and heat until sugar is dissolved. Add rhubarb and simmer until tender. Measure; add water to make 2 cups. Dissolve gelatin in warm rhubarb mixture. Add salt. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves 4.

Berkshire Pudding

3 squares unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
3 cups milk
¾ cup sugar
6 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to milk in double boiler and heat. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Combine sugar, flour, and salt. Add a small amount of chocolate mixture, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Then cook 20 to 25 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Add vanilla. Chill and serve with cream. Serves 6.

Butterscotch Cream

4 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
4 cups milk, scalded
2 eggs, well beaten
4 tablespoons butter
2/3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed

Add tapioca and salt to milk. Cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Pour small amount of tapioca mixture over eggs, stirring vigorously. Return to remaining tapioca and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from over hot water. Melt butter and sugar in saucepan and cook until sugar is completely dissolved and mixture bubbles. Add to tapioca mixture, stirring vigorously until blended. Chill. Serves 8.

SUPPOSING that, beginning tomorrow, all the newspapers are discontinued. What a furore the public would make "News! News! We must have news or we will be no better off than the ancients." All right, suppose we give them news but cut out the advertisements.

Then you would discover that politics, the doings of society, notices of fires, accidents, deaths, scandals, sports, the activities of the police and criminals add little or nothing to the real comfort and happiness of this greatest age in the world's history.

Advertising is the NEWS of all the looms, of all the furnaces, of all the laboratories, of all the shops, of all the stores, of all the world, AND ALL WORKING FOR YOU.

Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once cost a king's ransom are yours at little prices. Advertising pits merchant against merchant, artisan against artisan, producer against producer, for your benefit, forcing out the best there is in everything and telling the world about it.
